Additional Information Notice For China-Based Users Regarding Privacy Policy

About this Additional Information Notice

The Intel Privacy Notice outlines Intel's personal information handling practices. If you reside in the People's Republic of China ("China"), the following provisions provide additional information in relation to applicable personal information privacy laws in China including the Personal Information Protection Law of China ("PIPL").

This Additional Information Notice should be read in conjunction with and supplements the Intel Privacy Notice and is not intended to supersede or override it. In the event of any conflict or inconsistency between the provisions of this Additional Information Notice and the Intel Privacy Notice, the provisions of this Additional Information Notice shall prevail.

What Kinds of Information Do We Collect?

Under the PIPL, "personal information" means any information, whether recorded in electronic or another format, that relates to an identified or identifiable natural person, excluding anonymised information. "Sensitive personal information" means personal information that, if leaked or if used illegally, is likely to cause harm to a natural person's personal dignity or endanger his or her personal safety or the safety of his or her property.

Please refer to the Intel Privacy Notice for a description of the categories of personal information handled by Intel. Intel may also collect your sensitive personal information, such as financial information (e.g. payment information), biometric information (e.g. security camera images), location data (e.g. device IP address), and the personal information of persons under the age of 14, as set out in the Intel Privacy Notice, but only after providing you with notice and obtaining your consent as required under PIPL.

How We Use Information

We collect and process your personal information, including sensitive personal information, only for specified, explicit and reasonable purposes and to the extent directly relevant to the purposes of processing, as set out in the Intel Privacy Notice.

If the purposes are modified, Intel will take the necessary measures as required by the PIPL, including obtaining separate consent.

We may process your personal information for the purposes set out in the Intel Privacy Notice if one of the following applies:

• with your prior consent to the processing for one or more specific purposes as set out in the Intel Privacy Notice;
• processing of your personal information is necessary to conclude or perform a contract to which you are party, or for human resources management in accordance with the labor rules and regulations established in accordance with the law;

• processing is necessary for compliance with any statutory duties or legal obligations;

• processing is necessary in order to, in an emergency, protect the lives, health or property of natural persons;

• your personal information has been made public by you or has otherwise been lawfully made public, the processing is done pursuant to the PIPL and the extent the processing is reasonable; or

• the processing is done in other circumstances provided for in applicable laws or administrative regulations.

How We Share Information

As set out in the Intel Privacy Notice, we may share certain personal information internally with our affiliates or with third parties, such as suppliers and vendors. When required by applicable law, before sharing your personal information with any third parties we will notify you of the name and contact details of the third parties, the types of personal information to be shared, and the purposes and means of processing and sharing the personal information. We will also obtain your prior consent to the sharing of personal information where required by applicable law.

We will only share your personal information for specific and definite purposes pursuant to the principles of lawfulness, fairness, necessity and good faith, and only share the personal information to the extent necessary for the specific purposes you are informed of.

How We Transfer Information across the Border

We may transfer your following personal information outside of China to Intel US headquarters (i.e., Intel Corporation incorporated at 2200 Mission College Blvd, Santa Clara, CA 95054, Dataprotectionofficer@intel.com) for the purpose of ensuring service experience on the Intel website, marketing and managing customer contact information based on the Intel group standard by means of using SaaS services provided by third parties (such as Adobe Analytics, Oracle and SFDC):
• Cookie data (The first three of the four octets of the device's IP address collected from the Intel China website, and the unique identifier of the device generated by Adobe Analytics);

• General personal information of customer contacts: name, email address, work phone number, work address, company name, industry, position/responsibilities, social media accounts.

To the extent that we transfer your personal information with any recipient that is based outside of China, we will obtain your prior separate consent before transferring such personal information if consent is chosen as the lawful basis.

We will only transfer your personal information to the extent necessary and will work with the overseas recipient to process it in a secure manner to protect your legitimate interests and to avoid causing harms to you. We and the overseas recipient will only retain your personal information for the minimum necessary retention period unless otherwise required by applicable laws.

You have the right to exercise your personal information rights over the overseas recipient by visiting the “Contact Us” section of the Intel Privacy Notice and submitting a request (for example by sending an email to dataprotectionofficer@intel.com).

Under our agreement for cross-border transfer of personal information with the overseas recipient, you could be considered a third-party beneficiary and could be entitled to exercise the third-party beneficiary rights if you do not expressly refuse within 30 days.

Personal information of Minors

In China, Intel does not normally collect the personal information of children under the age of 14. If we do, we will require proper consent from a parent or legal guardian, and we will verify such consent through proper methods prescribed under laws. In this regard, we may request for name and other information relating to the parent or legal guardian to the extent required to verify proper consent. If we learn that we have collected children's personal information without legal guardians' consent, we will delete it from our systems.

Your Choices and Rights

You have the right to make decisions on the processing of your personal information. In addition to your rights set out in the Intel Privacy Notice, you may also request for explanation of our personal information processing rules.
How to Contact Us

If you have questions or concerns about Intel's privacy practices or to exercise any of your rights and choices as described in this Additional Information Notice or the Intel Privacy Notice, you can contact us by visiting the “Contact Us” section of the Intel Privacy Notice and submitting a request.

Revisions to this Additional Information Notice

We may revise this Additional Information Notice from time to time as described in this section so it accurately reflects our practices and legal requirements. You should check back regularly to stay informed of our privacy practices. When making any such revisions, we will notify you if required by applicable law.
