To our valued supplier partners,

Thank you for your outstanding support throughout this challenging year to tackle the pandemic, maintain everyone's safety as a #1 priority while delivering uninterrupted supply to our customers. As COVID-19 cases surge across the globe, we call on your continued focus and support to protect all workers and their families' safety. The potential for fatigue is significant given the lengthy duration of this pandemic, and the recent spike in cases is cause for concern. We request the highest level of vigilance in ensuring adherence to safety protocols, including wearing a facemask, social distancing, washing hands, and staying home when not feeling well.

In our locations around the world, we are proactively reinforcing our policies, limiting on-site personnel, and remaining diligent in complying with all our safety protocols including the prompt reporting of any confirmed cases of individuals who have been on an Intel site or close contact with other workers during their Intel engagement. We also encourage everyone to continue emphasizing caution at home and while out in the community to help protect our families and colleagues. Updates to our best practices, policies, guidelines, and response are located in the Supplier Coronavirus Policy page.

We rely on your continued support and partnership to maintain critical operations and safely deliver the essential compute capabilities the world needs to respond to this pandemic. If there are learnings we can share to aid in your operations, or if you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to contact your Intel account team or me directly.

Best regards,
